Sometimes books lie, but not me, I'm a book that always tells the truth. Step by step, the reader walks into the story and at every page the child by your side cries that it's not true, that I'm lying. Don't listen, I always tell the truth.

Every page draws a smile, something to understand and put back in place, because communication isn't just made of words and even a book can have a laugh joking with the reader.

Alla bambina piacciono i lombrichi.

Anche Damiano li guarda contento. A volte mette via due bottigliette di vetro dei succhi di frutta. La prende per mano. Servono due sassi e due legni. Siedono sulla terra fresca. Battono sul legno con i sassi, cercano lombrichi da mettere nelle bottiglie.

Gli altri stanno alla larga dai lombrichi e Damiano è contento. Silenzia pare contenta sempre. Guardano i lombrichi nel vetro e Damiano dice scegliamo un posto.

Lei corre fino al cespuglio e liberano

An attentive, curious look into the beauty and wisdom of nature, which never ceases to amaze. Everyone knows about the lizard's cold blood, but few know that it likes to sleep on roses. Everyone knows about the octopus' tentacles, but few know it has a big brain. Nobody knows, for instance, that the hummingbird is beautiful yet very aggressive, even though everyone thinks they know.

With powerful and refined illustrations, and a few captivating words, Arianna Papini manages to disrupt the most common stereotypes on animals, showing that reality often has many shades and it's on us to not stop at what's on the surface.

An adventure that runs on the imagination's tracks through breath-taking panoramic illustrations, guided by the rhythm of the evocative text and the curiosity of a girl who loves to get lost in books.

The concluding appendix unveils an engaging game: each sentence in this book is formed by the meaning of the names of the countries of the world, pieced together through their etymology. Because even words have a story and, just like people, they are never still: they travel to embrace the immense varieties of our Earth.

Marco and Giulio are siblings. They love to sail with grandpa's yellow boat, but they perceive the sea in different ways. Giulio thinks it's just a very big blue board. Instead Marco feels it as an explosion of sensations. Sometimes Marco can't find the right words to tell his feelings and he feels like a turtle trapped in a net. But, maybe, it's just a matter of distances and communication: he likes to be near other people but not to be touched. Near and distant at the same time: like in a school of fish.

A twenty-thousand-leagues-under-the-sea trip through the eyes of an autistic child, with astonishing coloured figures and poetic words.

Chiara Lorenzoni is a lawyer and a writer. She's the author of many well received children's books.

Giulia Conoscenti is a young illustrator and animator. She won the Ronzinante prize in 2017.

...DI UN PINGUINO AGILISSIMO
CHE SA PURE DANZARE...

E fu così che con fare deciso
un orso bruno sbucò all'improvviso.
«Ma non vedete che sto riposando?
Qualcuno mi spieghi 'sto finimondo!
Qui si fan chiacchiere a ogni ora
ma non sapete che qualcuno lavora?»
«Non è colpa nostra se vivi in un tronco
se vegli di notte e di giorno sei stanco.
Ma lasciamo stare i discorsi banali
piuttosto, dicci, che fai con le ALI?»
«Queste? Che ali? Vi state sbagliando...
Non sono mie, le ho trovate girando.
Be', a dire il vero è una settimana
che le nascondo dentro la tana da quando ho scoperto che posso volare
e che basta solo saperle usare.
Certo ti serve buon ALLENAMENTO
impegno e costanza, ma poi sei contento.

Però vi prego, tenete il SEGRETO non ditelo in giro, se no lo m'inquieto».
«Un orso? Che vola? Che dici mai?
Dicendolo in giro avrei solo dei guai.
Sta' pure tranquillo, orso VOLANTE segreto a vita natural durante!»

...DI UN PINGUINO AGILISSIMO CHE SA PURE DANZARE...

Il mondo è a rovescio, c'è poco da fare
e se c'è un orso che può volare
ci sarà forse addirittura
qualche altro SCHERZO DI MADRE NATURA tipo un pesce che può annegare
o un uccello che non sa volare.
Infatti ho incontrato lo scorso maggio
un certo uccello dal folto piumaggio che non sa volare ma ciò nonostante la cosa non pare per niente importante.
È un pinguino di quelli assai BUFFI che dondolandosi camminano GOFFI.
Questo però è LEGGIADRO e fluente volteggia sul ghiaccio leggero, ELEGANTE.

Ciò che peraltro è piuttosto curioso
è che persino durante il riposo indossa nastri, scarpette e tutù che da un bel giorno non s'è tolto più.
«Mi vengono meglio le piroette
quando calzo queste scarpette.
Guardate il tutù, mi sta a pennello ci sto benissimo, mi sento BELLO.
Niente paura, nessun dottore non sono MALATO ma danzatore.
Non c'è bisogno di medicine
mi trovo a mio agio con le BALLERINE.»
Così dicendo e in tono aggraziato con un inchino ci ha salutato.

The true story of Manoel Francisco Dos Santos, best known as Garrincha ("Sparrow"): although he had several defects caused by poliomyelitis (his spine was deformed, his right leg bent outwards and his left leg was six centimeters shorter and curved inwards) he played three World Cups and became one of the greatest Brazilian football players in history. He became very famous during the Fifties and Sixties for his dribbling talent and his goals, but the story of his life outside the field is even more interesting.

Antonio Ferrara was born in 1957, he worked for many years as an educator in a residential care community for minors, and now he is an author for children and young adult. He won the Andersen Award (the best Italian prize for children's literature) twice: in 2012 as best writer and in 2015 as illustrator. Garrincha is his first graphic novel.

Being a genius isn't necessarily good. At least not for Guglielmo Malvasi, whose childhood has been swallowed by a precocious academic career he can escape just by dying. Or better yet, only by faking his death he will be able at last to discover life, with the help of an unconventional Nobel prize laureate in physics and thanks to his friendship with Dora, a sweet fifty-years-old Romanian caregiver who loves savoury food and who is gifted with a great emotional intelligence.

Anna Vivarelli was born in Turin in 1958. She made her debut as a young author of short stories and radio dramas for Rai, the national public broadcasting company of Italy. Since the mid 90s she has been devoting herself full time to children's literature and reading education. In 2010 she won the Italian Andersen prize for best author.

Night. Rain. A country road.

Nino is lying on the tarmac, the scooter past the guard rail. He does not remember why he is there, but gradually the memory of a place resurfaces: a "gay rehabilitation institute" administered by religious people, where he went to "cure" what his parents consider a disease. Don Claudio, the chancellor, guides the guests on the path of prayer, but the oppressive climate throws the boy into a deep crisis; the same crisis that will bring Sabina, another hospitalized, to take her own life away. Once escaped from the institution, will Nino find himself and his true identity?

Gabriele Clima is a writer and illustrator for children, author of many books on social topics such as discomfort, diversity and integration. In 2017, he won the Italian Andersen Award. His books are translated in eighteen languages.

“Homosexual.
 Why does someone say it softly, undertone?
 Or strong, like a wall to be torn down.
 Or fast, so it ends first, or on narrow lips, that you don't understand, or monco, half, homo, like a detergent that washes away the guilt.
 Why does no one say that word as it is, simple,
 clean - homosexual - as it must be said?”
